

INDIANA POLITICS AGAIN IN A TANGLE

Republicans Shout for Fairbanks, but Few Want Him Nominated.

PROHIBITION A BIG ISSUE

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 15.—This year probably more than any previous one the Indiana apportionment on politics holds good—yet you never know what Indiana will do until the vote is counted.

For Indiana politics is mixed. Republican, Democratic and Progressive ranks are all divided on their issues.

Fairbanks is not one of the stumbling blocks of his party in Indiana, but his nomination for the Presidency is decidedly one of the "troubles." Indiana Republicans are mostly for Fairbanks. But fully 40 per cent of those who are shouting for him don't want to see him nominated.

Indiana Republicans want harmony. The 40 per cent of Fairbanks' "shouters" who don't want to see him nominated believe that his name at the head of the next Republican national ticket will excommunicate him from the party throughout the country that his defeat would be a foregone conclusion. They remember that Roosevelt once said, "I don't like him."

There will be no division in the Indiana delegation to the Republican national convention and that delegation will be for Fairbanks. But it will question the admissibility of his nomination. It will be "for" him but it will not fight very strongly for his nomination.

Progressives Going Back.

As for the Progressives of the Indiana delegation they are back to the 40 per cent. They are falling over themselves to get back. With the exception of four or five all the old progressive leaders have deserted the organization. Such portion of the "Old Guard" as remains is still with the party and platform are permanent with the ideas outlined at the Chicago meeting of the Progressive committee Tuesday.

They would like to amalgamate with the Republicans, or at least to name a common set of candidates with that party. While they may not have no new Indiana Indiana for a candidate, it must be remembered that a number of Congressional districts as well as many individual counties in Indiana are very close and a poll of only about 5 per cent by the Progressives might swing the election to the other side.

Wilson of course will have the Democratic delegation from Indiana. Bryan has a large following in this State and while he does not have sufficient control over his friends to induce them to vote for the President, yet he leaves a sentiment against him just the same.

But Wilson is developing considerable strength among Indiana Republicans of the "solid business man" type. Many of them are saying that "Wilson kept us out of war" and now a number of Republicans of this class are now readying Wilson and seem to be ready to vote for him.

Prohibition Big Issue.

The big State issue, and one that will probably decide the contest for United States Senator, is the question of Prohibition—either the fight to keep it or the fight to either the fight to keep it or the fight to drop it.

Each side fears that issue and in all probability neither party will contain a prohibition plank.

Yet prohibition is the real question in State politics in Indiana this year and there have a deciding effect upon the national election in this State.

Some years ago seven out of the fifteen two-counties in Indiana were dry as laws could make them. In twelve years the question has gone to the people. Then the tide of prohibition changed to the city, village or townships and practically all of Indiana voted "wet" again. In the fight which was waged the old familiar charges of "prohibition doesn't prohibit" those of "modem day" were raised.

Small round mirrors and triplets mirthfully arranged by the manufacturers with bats as toys at the rate of 45 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 342 of the tariff act of 1913, and the General Appraisers hold the casings in the same manner.

In another裁減 decision made by Judge McMillan, Formosa, Panama, Korea, Japan, and Keweenaw, Michigan, are advanced to $1.50 a dozen, "add packing and cases." These were advanced as "with maturity and with value."

No particular note is made of the activities of this association of prominent importers, but it was said yesterday that the termination of the war rapid progress will be made in helping the organization to become more powerful and influential in import circles throughout the country.

Those who have been more or less disturbed by the reports reaching this country concerning the British Board of Trade to tighten the British blockade so as to shut off entirely the trade between America and Germany have been advised that the State Department officials at Washington do not regard the British Board of Trade as having had any bearing on the movement of goods of German and Austrian origin from British ports.

Watson was a candidate against Vice-President Marshall in 1908 for Governor. He was on a county local election platform, much against his will at the time, and he shows no signs of heart since. Now he was to be nominated for Vice-President.

Watson, now a member of the Indiana National Committee for eight years, probably has the "inside track" over Jim Watson, for four terms Congressmen. Now is not a temperature gauge, and although he is regarded as an absent-minded soul, he is now a factor.
